Educational program Commencing October 2021

<GO> Quant Camp, hosted by Bloomberg in collaboration with GIFT City and under the aegis of IFSCA, puts you in the driver's seat of a trend that is redefining the global capital market landscape - data and machine driven investment decision making, also known as factor investing.

There are two stages to this engaging, educational program:

1. Take the <GO> Quant Camp Test and earn a certificate

Discover the learning journey as you watch insightful videos, read and research before taking the Quant test. You need to achieve a passing percentage of 70% to receive your completion certificate.

2. Enter the <GO> Quant Camp Group Competition

Represent your institution and compete against the best to win the title of <GO> Quant Champions. Through this program you'll get access to the Bloomberg terminal, key financial market concepts & ideas and hands-on experience to apply your learning. Application for this stage is made through the point of contact at your institution and details are found on the program platform upon your registration.

FAQs

Who are the organizers?

This program is hosted by Bloomberg in collaboration with GIFT City and under the aegis of IFSCA.

Is this an individual or team competition?

There are two parts. The first part of the exercise is individual learning; post which you receive a certificate of completing the online course on Factor Investing. The second part is a team competition. The team formation is made by your university/institution point of contact and details are found on the program platform upon your registration.

What do participants need to do in the team competition?

Each team will work on an investment model thesis and interpret the results. They must then present this in a video submission to the organizers.

What are the awards?

The winning teams will be awarded a certificate of merit and also win a chance to be mentored by an industry expert. What's more they also stand a chance to be published in a Bloomberg publication based on the quality of their idea.

Is there a fee to enter this contest?

No. Participants/institutions are not required to pay any fees to participate.

Who can participate in the program?

This competition is open exclusively to MBA students from these institutions.
